The screenshot shows a Jira issue tracker interface. At the top, the URL is `adrinacolaco.atlassian.net/issues/?filter=-48jqI=labels%20%3D%20frontend%20ORDER%20BY%20created%20DESC`. Below the search bar, there are tabs for 'Ask AI', 'Basic', and 'JQL'. A filter is applied: 'Labels = frontend'. A red arrow points to this filter. Below the filter, there is a table of work items.

In 5–8 lines, explain how your setup reflects Scrum artifacts (Epic/Product Backlog/Sprint Backlog), events (Sprint Planning), and pillars/values (give 1–2 examples).

The high-level vision or goal is captured as an Epic, broken down into prioritized backlog items in the Product Backlog. Each Sprint, I select items from the Product Backlog and transform them into a clear, actionable Sprint Backlog. Before every Sprint, I run a Sprint Planning session to agree on what can be achieved (the Sprint Goal) and how to do it. Everything—from goals to tasks—is visible to all, fostering shared understanding and transparency. I continuously inspect progress (via backlog and increments) and adapt plans to stay aligned with goals. The Sprint Goal sharpens Focus, while discussing challenges openly demonstrates Courage to improve and adapt.
